The following records provide a crude measure of RAFI’s outreach, and by extrapolation, of RAFI’s impact during 2000. Though no replacement for quantitative indicators, these lists – of RAFI Communiqués, News Releases, and GenoTypes – provide a thumbnail sketch of the issues RAFI has addressed over the year, and the publications we have released about them. The later summaries (of media contacts and coverage in the North and South, and of speaking engagements and other events where RAFI’s research was disseminated) provide additional measures of RAFI’s contact with the public. Lastly, a summary of RAFI’s electronic information services illustrates the extensive dissemination of RAFI’s research and publications via the Internet. Because we have conducted a periodical search for media references in North America, the media coverage we know about is significantly skewed in favour of North America. Media impact in the South and Europe is almost certainly under-represented in this list. Known citations of RAFI material in academic journals have not been included, because we have not monitored these publications systematically. We do know, however, that RAFI is quoted frequently in a wide range of scientific, legal and other specialized publications. We also know that RAFI material is further distributed, as it appears, on several well-subscribed listservers, including GRAIN’s “BIO-IPR Resource Pointer”, and the Global Forum on Sustainable Food and Nutritional Security.

On the Internet

The Internet has become the most important method for disseminating RAFI’s research and analysis. Approximately 1,758,000 publications, graphics, and other RAFI documents were opened from our website, http://www.rafi.org, during the year, by an average of almost 25,000 distinct users each month, from 113 identifiable countries. In addition, RAFI has joined GRAIN and Latin American colleagues in mounting a new Spanish language Web site, aimed at users in Latin America. Please feel free to visit at: http://www.biodiversidadla.org
By the end of 2000, print copies of the RAFI Communiqués were mailed to 445 subscribers in 81 different countries. Of the subscribers, 69% (or 308) were from the South. Four issues of the Communiqués were published during the fiscal year of September 01, 1999 to August 31, 2000.
